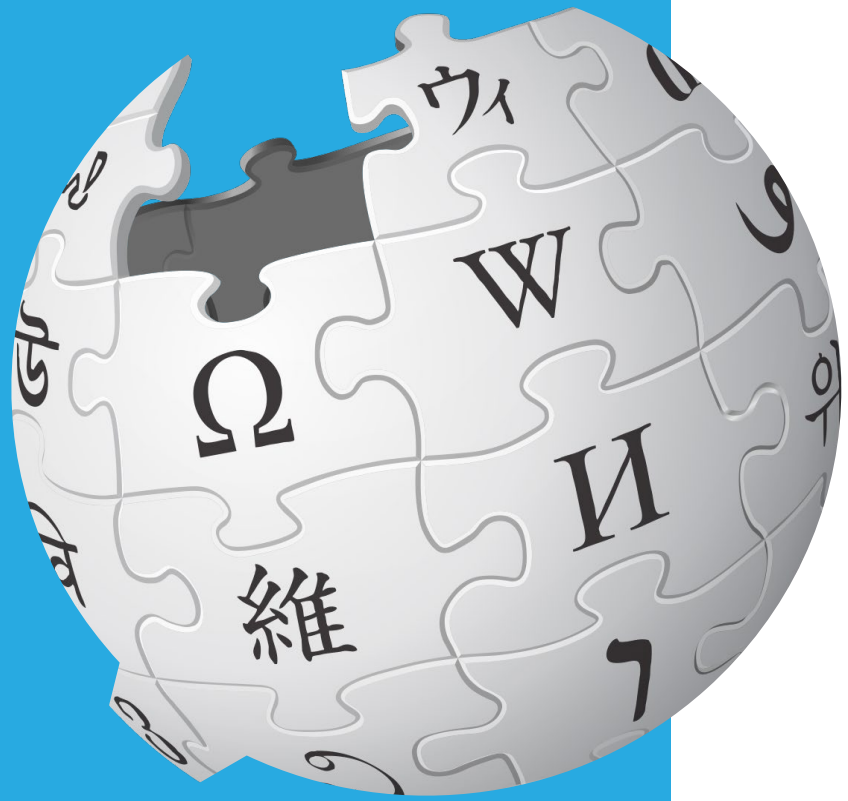
- Create a corporate identity



Did you know?

Wikipedia's logo resembles a globe constructed of puzzle pieces

The different letters depict multilingualism
The letters spell Wikipedia
The gap = always space for more information

What is a Corporate Identity?

- Visual representation of a brand or company
- Encapsulates the personality and culture of the brand
- Consistency ensures the brand is remembered and recognised
- Includes all visuals including logo, stationery, adverts, uniforms, website, etc.

Principles of effective logo design

A logo does not sell, it identifies.

A logo derives its meaning from the quality of the thing it symbolises, not the other way around.

A logo is less important than the product it signifies; its meaning is more important than what it looks like.
