Fun Fact

DID YOU KNOW: Nearly 50% of all marketers take their content from various trustworthy sources and change it to present to their own readers. Thenextscoop.com

Content distribution

There is no one size fits all solution to social media marketing and when sharing your content to social media you don't only want to be punting your products and services, but you want to provide valuable content and keep a good balance of the content that you are sharing.

Content distribution rules

5-3-2 Rule

- 5 Pieces of curated content
- 3 Pieces of content from you
- 2 Pieces of personalised content

Rule of thirds

- 1/3rd Original content
- 1/3rd Curated content
- 1/3rd Personalised content

65-25-10 Rule

- 65% Original content
- 20% Curated content
- 10% Syndicated content

Current curation

What is content curation?

Content curation is the act of discovering and gathering relevant information on a particular topic or area of interest with the intention of sharing it online to provide value.

How to curate content

- Manual research
- Content curation tools
  - Feedly
  - Sproutsocial
  - Scoop.it
  - Buzzsumo
  - Curata
- Social media platforms
  - LinkedIn
  - Twitter lists

When deciding what content to share, ask yourself;

- Which of my target audiences does this align with?
- Why does this help them or what value is it to them?
- Does this information come from a trustworthy source?

The benefits of curated content

- Saves time
- Contributes towards industry expertise
- Shows that you're in the game
- Grows your network
- Contributes to brand awareness
- Keeps you informed

Trend jacking

What is trend jacking?

Trend jacking is the act of capitalising on existing trends in order to amplify a brands presence online.

Sources for trend jacking

- News stories
- Trending hashtags
- Next hot craze
- Google trends

WARNING!!!

Trend jacking is a risky move. More often than not - companies making use of trend jacking get it wrong.

Trend jacking tips

- Do your research
- Stay up to date with news
- Be quick
- Be original
- Make sure it's relevant

Benefits of trend jacking

- Free publicity
- Improve brand recognition
- Position your brand as a thought leader
- Improve online authority
- Increase brand awareness

Behavioural psychology

What is behavioural psychology?

Also known as behaviouralism, behavioural psychology is the systematic approach to understanding the behaviour of humans, particularly with regards to the mind and the resulting behaviour.

In marketing, the use of behavioural psychology aims to change the behaviour of the consumer to benefit the business.

Reciprocity

Psychological response to a positive effect such as receiving something for free. Customer relationships are built on a system of give and take.

Informative

If someone needs information they will look for it in any way they can. Post content that causes curiosity.

Social justification

Customers would be more willing to purchase a product that was recommended by family or friends or if they see someone with the product.

Fear of omission

Similar to the fear of missing out. When a customer is afraid of missing out because of a time limit or limited quantity.

Fear of loss

Based on the fear of loss, we are more affected by great losses and most of us will avoid it at all costs. Focus on what your product or service can solve and what they will lose if they do not purchase it.

Paradox of choice

We sometimes get overwhelmed when we have too many choices in front of us. Consumers need to feel as though they are making the choice but you only want to present them with two options.

Content Library

What is a content library?

A content library is like a bank of content assets owned by a company that is placed in a central, internal portal that allows other departments within a company to access the content.

Creating your content library

- Create different tabs for various types of content
- Under each tab list;
  - Platform
  - Content type
  - Copy
  - Link
  - Visuals
  - Target audience

Content Calendar

Complete your content calendar with content from library and get ready to start posting!
