

Brand Identity Research Assignment

I chose Nike because its branding is very clear and easy to understand. Nike is a sportswear company, but it feels like more than just a brand—it represents motivation, effort, and pushing limits.

One of the first things I noticed is the logo, which is the famous “Swoosh.” It is very simple, yet it looks fast and dynamic. From a design perspective, I learned that a logo doesn’t need to be complex to be powerful. Nike’s logo proves that simplicity can make a brand more memorable.

The brand values of Nike focus on inspiration, performance, and confidence. Their slogan “Just Do It” is very short but strong. As a beginner, this helped me understand how important messaging is in design. It’s not just about visuals—the words also play a big role in communication.

In terms of visual style, Nike uses a lot of black and white colors with bold fonts. The designs are clean and not crowded. I noticed that most of their ads focus on one main subject, usually an athlete, which makes the message very clear. This taught me the importance of focus and not adding unnecessary elements in design.

The images used by Nike are usually high-energy and show movement, like running or jumping. This connects well with their brand idea of action and performance. I realized that choosing the right images is just as important as the layout and colors.
