Community relationship management is a method used by companies to establish and maintain a mutually beneficial relationship with communities.

Customer relationship management gone wrong

The Netflix blog post announcing the pricing change was gamely left open for comments and as of press time, there are about 8,800 pages of comments. Not 8,800 individual comments themselves, but 8,800 pages of comments. And guess what? Most commenters aren't asking for an address where they can send a thank you card.

One customer canceled the DVD service and promptly received this letter:

Dear [NAME]:

Recently, you switched to a streaming only plan that does not include DVDs. We noticed that you still have [TITLE] at home. Please return it within 7 days to avoid being billed. Unreturned DVDs are billed at $14 each and $20 for each Blu-ray disc plus tax. If you'd like to switch to a plan that includes DVDs, click here.

A social media policy is a corporate code of conduct that provides guidelines for employees who post content on the internet.

Nestle To repeat: we welcome your comments, but please don't post using an altered version of any of our logos as your profile pic - they will be deleted.

Paul Griffin Hmm, this comment is a bit "Big Brotherish" isn't it? I'll have whatever I like as my logo pic thanks! And if it's altered, it's no longer your logo is it!

Nestle @Paul Griffin - that's a new understanding of intellectual property rights. We'll muse on that. You can have what you like as your profile picture. But if it's an altered version of any of our logos, we'll remove it form this page.

Paul Griffin Not sure you're going to win friends in the social media space with this sort of dogmatic approach. I understand that you're on your back-foot due to various issues not excluding Palm Oil but Social Media is about embracing your market, engaging and having a conversation rather than preaching! Read www.duetrain.com and rethink!

Nestle Thanks for the lesson in manners. Consider yourself embraced. But it's our page, we set the rules, it was ever thus.

Nestle you have freedom of speech and expression. Here, there are some rules we set. As in almost any other forum. It's to keep things clear.

Paul Griffin Your page, your rules, true, and you just lost a customer, won the battle and lost the war! Happy?
2 hours ago · Report

Nestle Oh please .. it's like we're censoring everything to allow only positive comments.

Paul Griffin Don't beg, this debate for me is over, only boycotting your products will make you feel any pain I think, although your arrogance is quite extraordinary, it wasn't me that bought that palm oil!

Nestle Was I begging? How odd you should think so.

I had a disastrous time with them. In the end I was made to pay 580+ dollars more for bogus charges. I ended up going to Bell and they've been great. I mean really...you know your service in shit when you make Bell look good lol

Once with Bell I got a $1000+ landline bill because they never applied the Long Distance package I bought!

I had nothing but problems with bell for years with landline/satellite. But they've been good to me last 5 years or so. Switched to Rogers and virgin. Grass wasn't any greener on the other side, I'll just leave it at that lol. So now I'm back with what seems to be lesser of evils
