B2B Marketing

What is the key difference between B2B and B2C?

- Who is the audience?
- We need leads for B2B to succeed
- Where we source leads

B2B Content

- How do we structure B2B content?
- How is the direction changed?
- How does our optimal posting times change?

Organic content

- Show authority - Blogging
- Building trust - Interviews
- Cross platform content - Video and Interview
- Do emerging platforms have a place in B2B

Facebook for B2B

- What does organic content look like on Facebook?
- What engagement are we looking for?
- Structure of our page - consider a service
- Lead ads are fundamental
- Wider marketing efforts
- What do we need to offer?

Facebook tips

- Strong understanding of your audience
- Global VS Local
- Optimise your social media profiles
- Call to Action
- Drive people to opt-in
- Connect through videos
- Ask questions and survey your audience

Twitter for B2B

- How is your profile setup?
- How does your content differ?
- How does the nature of Twitter impact our approach?
- Structure of content
- Information
- Customer engagement

Twitter tips

- Give your brand some personality
- Listen before you tweet
- Make a good impression
- Become the conversation starter and push it
- Drive traffic to your content
- Engage
- Establish your company as an authority

YouTube for B2B

- Video content for B2B
- YouTube advertising
- Can we tell a story?
- Can we review a product or service?
- Testimonials and interviews

YouTube tips

- Build brand recognition
- Product demonstrations
- Educational content that showcases various professional services
- Leveraging your expertise
- The first 15 seconds are crucial

Instagram for B2B

- Storytelling
- Connecting with our customers
- Behind the scenes
- Descriptions are key

Instagram tips

- Share sneak peek photos about company updates
- Videos with quick demonstrations
- Tell your company story
- Encourage click-through
- Actively engage
    - Mention other users
    - Search relevant accounts
    - Comment and like other peoples posts

B2B ads strategy

- How often are we posting ads?
- What is our end goal?
- What else impacts our B2B social media?
- What is important for B2B but not B2C?
    - Buyer persona
    - Content should still be shareable and relative but with a professional tone in mind
    - Sales cycle
- How does engagement vary?
- How does our audience impact on us?
